ASHVIEW HEIGHTS

1920S
AH
30314

ABOUT THE AREA

Ashview Heights was developed in the 1920s as one of Atlanta's first planned middle-class communities for African Americans. Next door to the Atlanta University Center, it's home to historic Booker T. Washington High School, Atlanta's first public high school for Black students. Today, it offers tree-lined streets, early-1900s homes, and quick access to the Ashby MARTA station.

Location: West Atlanta, just north of I-20 and beside the Atlanta University Center

Nearby: Atlanta University Center, West End, Washington Park, Vine City
